

Recycling at the Newington Transfer Station

Newington's recycling program has been active for many years , back when almost everything had to be seperated into its own container and volunteers would stand watch and help with the myriad of questions involved with the process. Still however patrons showed up with their recyclables , and even though the process was troublesome , residents took pride in their communities efforts to relieve some of the burdon these materials had on the environment . That same sense of pride is still active today as recycling has become a more profitable and sustainable endeavor . Recycling has developed into a one-stop-drop collection program making it easier for residents to participate , thereby increasing the volume of these commodities and decreasing our landfill burden.
